

How Maya Onboards a Wedding

The questions Maya asks and when.

It's a conversation, not a form. Maya asks one topic at a time, accepts rough answers, and lets you skip anything optional.

Required

The wedding can't go live without these.

- Whose wedding is this?
 - e.g. "Snehal & Ronak"
- What are the wedding dates?
 - A single date or a range, with the year
- Which city and country is the wedding in?
 - Plus, if useful: "Is there one main venue or hotel guests should know about?"
- What kind of wedding is this?
 - Traditional, modern, a blend of two cultures, a destination celebration, however you'd put it
 - Stored privately for context only, never shown to guests
- Are guests hosted by the couple, or arranging their own stay?
 - If hosted: name of the place, map link, check-in time, check-out time, when guests travelling in should aim to arrive
 - "TBC" is fine for any of these.
- Your events
 - Share your event list, as much detail as possible; she asks follow-ups for what's missing
 - Per event, she captures: name, date, start time, optional end time, location, main venue or elsewhere, map link, dress guide, a food and drinks note, and any special guest instructions
 - Large time gap between events? She asks what guests should do: is something happening in between, is it free time, and if it's free time, is there anything worth suggesting

Optional

Skip freely; none of these holds up go-live.

- What should guests expect from each event?
 - Per event: the vibe, the food and drink, what the event means to you
- How will guests get to the venue and other locations?
 - Shuttles, own arrangements, mixed, or TBC
 - Follow-ups only as needed: airport to hotel, hotel to events, between venues, parking, late-night return
- The common guest questions

- Are plus-ones allowed? (yes / invite-only / no)
- Are children welcome?
- Who is my roommate?
- Can guests come for only one event or one night?
- Any dress code, gifts, travel, food, alcohol, or packing notes?
- Who should guests contact in an emergency?
 - Name, role, phone or WhatsApp, and when to use them
- How should Maya sound to guests?
 - Warm & elegant, fun & playful, concise & practical, traditional & formal, like a close friend of the couple

After Go-Live
